Poll puts Coakley, Grossman ahead of Baker

The two leading contenders for the Democratic nomination in the governor's race hold leads over Republican candidate Charlie Baker, according to a new poll.

The poll released on Wednesday by Western New England University's Polling Institute showed that Democrats Martha Coakley and Steve Grossman lead Baker 54 percent to 25 percent and 38 percent to 29 percent, respectively, in a hypothetical matchup. Baker previously ran in 2010. METRO

Watertown cops talk shootout in Congress

Lessons learned. A Homeland Security Committee hearing on Wednesday examined the Boston Marathon bombings.

The harrowing shootout between the accused Boston Marathon bombers and Watertown police was recounted in dramatic detail on Wednesday for a Congressional committee examining the lessons learned from the attack.

"For eight and a half minutes we were the best damn police department in the world," said Watertown Police Chief Ed Deveau, who recalled how his officers narrowly avoided bullets and bombs being aimed at them allegedly by Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Deveau, along with Sgt. Jeffrey Pugliese, former Boston police commissioner Ed Davis and Harvard professor Herman Leonard testified before the U.S. House Homeland Security Committee meeting.

Committee Chairman Rep. Michael McCaul, of Texas, praised the work of the first responders and said their bravery the night of April 19 stopped further people from being hurt.

"Our nation could have been further terrorized. These terrorists had six more bombs in their car and they were on their way to Times Square," McCaul said.

The law enforcement officials and experts were asked by committee members what lessons they learned and how the communication during the response and manhunt could have been improved.

The hearing comes just days before the first anniversary of the Marathon bombings. It also comes just days before the airing of a TV program on the National Geographic Channel titled, "Inside the Hunt for the Boston Bombers."

- The two-hour show, which will air Sunday at 9 p.m., uses news media footage, amateur-shot video, firsthand accounts and dramatic re-creations, to follow the days after the bombings as information unfolded. National Geographic said the producers received unprecedented access to the FBI, Boston Police Department, survivors of the bombings and those caught up in the manhunt.

FY 2015. Walsh debuts $2.7 billion budget plan

Mayor Marty Walsh is proposing a $2.7 billion budget plan that would increase city spending by 4.5 percent in the 2015 fiscal year, an increase of $118.2 million.

He also unveiled a 5-year, $1.9 billion capital plan that officials said identifies 319 new and continuing projects, and proposes $286.8 million in new project authorizations.

"While this budget reflects my own priorities, it also reflects the priorities of the people of Boston," Walsh said in a news release.

Property taxes continue to be the largest source of the city's revenue. METRO

After the alleged robberies, the suspect reportedly told an animal control officer he was "trying to get out of here, and if I give you a large sum of money, would you take me to the nearest train station?"

Jeremy T. Lentz, 31, of Quincy, was arrested nearby and charged with felony breaking and entering, receiving stolen property over $250, larceny of prescription pills and possession of burglarious tools. METRO

Mistaken ID. DA drops charges against man in North End sex assault

Prosecutors have dropped charges against a 26-year-old man who was arrested after the victim of a North End assault claimed he was her attacker.

The Suffolk district attorney's office said on Wednesday that prosecutors filed court documents to end proceedings against Ross Currier, who was arrested last month for the Feb. 15 attack. The woman, in her 20s, told police she was entering her North End apartment when a man pushed his way in behind her, assaulted her and took a photo of her with his phone before fleeing.

Last month the victim called police to report that she saw her attacker playing basketball. That man was Currier, who lives in the North End, authorities said. The victim told police that she was between 90 and 95 percent certain that Currier was her attacker, giving police probable cause to arrest him.

Alibi holds up

The charges were dropped after authorities investigated the alibi Currier provided to police, which was independently verified, and after an examination of his phone records.

- His lawyer had said at the time of Currier's arrest that the victim made a mistake in identity and Currier was with his fiancee the night of the attack.

When Currier was released following his arrest, he was ordered to wear a GPS monitoring device. A similar attack took place March 16, and Currier's GPS device showed he did not commit that attack.

The investigation into the two attacks remains open, the district attorney's office said.

City to study addiction and recovery services

Boston will collaborate with the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts Foundation on a study of the capacity of addiction and recovery services in the city, Mayor Marty Walsh announced on Wednesday.

The city is also creating the first ever Office of Recovery Services, a group that will be comprised of experts to assist with the study, which is slated for completion this year.

Despite significant and historic health care reform in the state, Walsh said, treatment for mental health and substance abuse disorders remains challenging in terms of access, capacity and cost.

"I think we can all agree that the current system is complex, overburdened and in need of reform," he said.

T will hold public hearings ahead of proposed fare hike

Mass transit. How do you feel about having to pay more?

Two years after raising the cost of riding the MBTA by an average of 23 percent, the transit agency is planning another fare hike, and the T wants to hear from riders about the issue.

Before fares increase by 5 percent on July 1, transit users will have the chance to attend seven public meetings throughout the remainder of April in Boston, Newton, Medford, Lynn and Braintree. The meetings will focus on the T's proposal to increase the cost of a monthly subway pass from $70 to $75, and increase single-ride fares on the bus, subway, commuter rail and boat by between 5 and 50 cents.

The first meetings are set to happen in Braintree and Boston on April 16, and the last one is scheduled in Medford on April 30. Written comments will also be accepted through April 30, according to the T.

- The MBTA is proposing to increase fares by 5 percent on July 1 as part of the effort to balance its FY15 budget.
- The fare increase is projected to raise revenue by about 4 percent, from $20 million to $24 million.
- The T estimates the hike will result in a less than 1 percent reduction in ridership.

Stabbing. High-schooler wielding knife injures 21 people in Pa. school

A 16-year-old student wielding two knives went on a stabbing rampage in the hallways of a Pittsburgh-area high school Wednesday, injuring 21 people, about half of them seriously, officials said.

The attacker, identified as Alex Hribal by police, moved stealthily through Franklin Regional High School, stabbing his victims in the torso and slashing arms and faces before anyone realized what was happening, students and officials said. Some of the injured taken to nearby hospitals were in critical condition, doctors said. The student reportedly will be charged as an adult.

Students described a scene of panic, with the school hastily evacuated after a fire alarm was pulled. The unidentified sophomore suspected in the attack was in police custody, said Tom Seefeld, the chief of police in Murrysville, Pa.

The attacker, described by a classmate as a quiet person who kept to himself, started his rampage about 7:13 a.m., going along the hallways to several classrooms at the school in Murrysville, about 20 miles east of Pittsburgh, officials said.

An armed security officer subdued and arrested the suspect with help from the principal, Seefeld said.

A total of 21 people, most of them 14 to 17 years old, were transported to area hospitals, four by medical helicopter. Several had life-threatening injuries, with nine in critical condition, hospital officials said.

Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Corbett said he had ordered state police to help local law enforcement respond to the incident. The FBI also said it had deployed agents to work with local law enforcement.

"As a parent and grandparent, I can think of nothing more distressing than senseless violence against children," Corbett said. REUTERS

Clinton not running (yet), but her name raises money

As Hillary Clinton weighs a run for president in 2016, at least a dozen independent groups have sprung up to raise money in her name.

Sporting names such as Madam Hillary 2016, HillaryFTW and other variations on Clinton's name, the new crop of political action committees is a sign of the 66-year-old's enduring star power more than 20 years after she first became a national figure as the wife of President Bill Clinton.

Some of the groups hope to emulate the success of Ready for Hillary, the organization of well-connected Democrats that already has raised millions of dollars to encourage Hillary Clinton to launch a bid to become the United States' first woman president.

Others don't have much to show for their efforts. A few won't say what they plan to do with any money they raise. REUTERS

Trial. Pistorius forced to view graphic photo of girlfriend's skull

A South African prosecutor forced Oscar Pistorius on Wednesday to look at a forensic photograph that showed the head of his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp after it was blown open by a hollow-point bullet fired by the Olympic and Paralympic track star.

In a dramatic opening to his cross-examination of Pistorius, prosecutor Gerrie Nel made him admit he had killed Steenkamp, then later confronted him with the photograph showing the side and back of her skull, her hair matted with blood and brains.

"Have a look there. I know you don't want to because you don't want to take responsibility," Nel said to gasps from the packed public gallery. REUTERS

‘Heartbleed’ bug poses major threat to user data on the web

Fix. Representatives for Facebook, Google and Yahoo have taken steps to mitigate the impact on users.

Security experts warn there is little Internet users can do to protect themselves from the recently uncovered “Heartbleed” Internet threat that exposes data to hackers, at least not until vulnerable websites take security steps.

The Heartbleed bug in widely used web encryption technology known as OpenSSL affects software on servers that host websites.

That software is not used on personal computers or mobile devices, so even though the bug exposes passwords and other data to hackers, it must be fixed by website operators.

The bug has the potential to affect users of some of the world’s biggest websites.

Mark Maxey, a director with cybersecurity firm Accuvant, said it is no easy task for large organizations to implement the multiple steps to clean up the bug, which means it will take some a long time to do so. REUTERS

We're likin' your new look, Lupita

Lupita Nyong'o stepped out on the red carpet Tuesday for the first time since she was named Best Supporting Actress for her role in "12 Years a Slave" at the Oscars last month. She wore a white Giambattista Valli Couture dress with blue flowers and Christian Louboutin pumps for Marie Claire's Fresh Faces Party in West Hollywood. ## How many 53-year-olds look like this?

Reigning queen of comedy Julia Louis-Dreyfus graces the cover of April 24's "Rolling Stone" magazine, due out this week. And she's nude. And she looks incredible. I'm 20 years younger than her and our bodies don't even compare. Excuse me while I cry at my desk.

The "Veep" star, who has continued to find success long after the days of "Seinfeld" and "The New Adventures of Old Christine," last made the cover in 1998. Now, she wears only the words of the Constitution painted on her back. However, it's signed by John Hancock, who only put his, well, John Hancock, on the Declaration of Independence.

Teresa and Joe Giudice: Living a lie?

Reality show couple Teresa and Joe Giudice have been living large, but according to documents obtained by TMZ, they don't have much cash to their names.

Apparently they have almost zero equity in the three homes they own, one of which is worth $1.7 million. Their three lavish rides — a Maserati, Escalade and a Ford 350 — also have no equity in them. Neither do their Sea-Doo boat, Kawasaki four-wheeler and go-carts. The couple, who could face serious prison time for fraud, don't even have enough cash to pay their creditors. The bankruptcy trustee says one bank won't get the more than $5 million the couple owe.

The bankruptcy trustee also said the Giudices' dogs aren't valued at $600 — what the couple listed them as. Unless they have a gold tooth in their mouths, the pups aren't equity.

It makes us wonder what other reality stars don't live true to their show's premise? Are the Rich Kids of Beverly Hills really rich? Are the Gypsy Sisters really gypsies? Is the Bachelor real? Do we even have to ask that last question?

Still no answers in the death of Peaches Geldof

Autopsy reports are in for model and British socialite Peaches Geldof but the results are inconclusive, officials say. Toxicology reports could reveal the cause of death; however, results from that aren't expected for several weeks, U.K. police said.

The 25-year-old daughter of Irish musician Bob Geldof was found dead Monday at her Wrotham, Kent, home. Her rock star husband Tom Cohen said earlier this week that he would bring up their two young kids, Astala and Phaedra, "with their mother in their hearts every day."

JEFF PERRY IS READING YOUR TWEETS

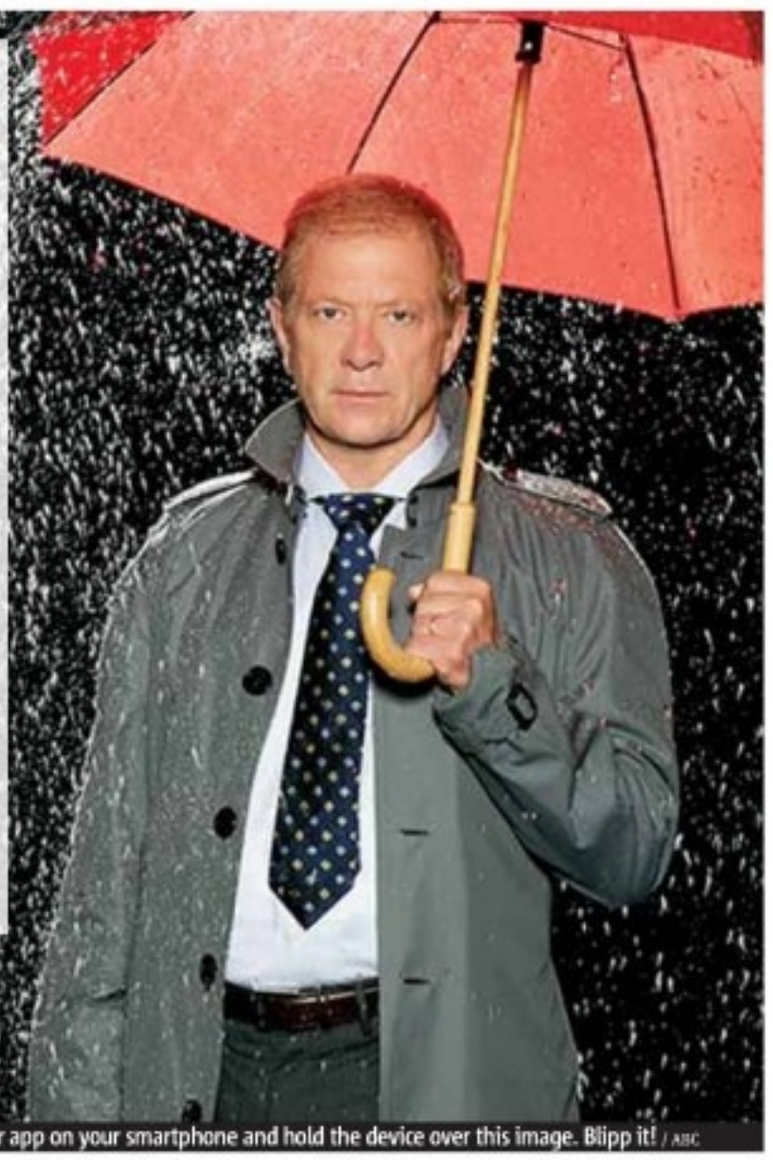
'Scandal' actor likens the series' Twitter action to the feel of live theater.



To get caught up on 'Scandal,' check out Jane Borden's recaps. Download the Blippar app on your smartphone and hold the device over this image. Blipp it! / ABC

Cyrus Beene, the White House Chief of Staff on ABC's hit drama "Scandal," is rarely happy and usually on the brink of cardiac arrest. But Jeff Perry, the actor who plays Beene with great skill and heart, is, he says, "grinning until it hurts" over the chance to portray a character "written with depth, complexity and dichotomy by Shonda [Rhimes]."

It's something he says he hasn't had enough of since his days performing with the prestigious Steppenwolf Theatre Company in Chicago, which he co-founded. This complexity — there are almost no clear villains or heroes on "Scandal," rare on a major network show — is also what's won millions of very vocal fans. And the cast keeps these fans through constant social media contact. "Scandal" airs its finale on April 17.

Is the amount of online interaction you have with fans reminiscent at all of the live-theater experience?

It is. And it feels unique in television and history, this level of while-it's-happening conversation, with 70,000 people talking to each other at once. At first it was absolutely disorienting to me. But then, slowly, I really started to dig it. And yes, it feels like when I was in 88 seats and we had our 300 subscribers, and we had a dialogue with them and got to know them. It's a little village. And I believe this rabid conversation — between people digging the show and the artists — kept us on the air. We didn't have conventional ratings for at least 14 episodes, but we had this ridiculously faithful fan base.

And it's fun on set. We tease each other: "I'm Instagramming this!" "Do I have your permission to tweet this picture of you with your pants around your ankles because they're ripped and being tailored for the next shot?"

What's your relationship like with Cyrus?

I adore playing this guy. He's absolutely devoted to his take on what government is and what it could be. He's wired for politics, and for caregiving, and that space where idealism meets an absolute alley fight. That's the beautiful thing about Shonda and the writers' creation: the level of sympathy and empathy they create for people who have done hideous things. Our brains love to conveniently forget [things like], "Oh, that's right, Cyrus had that girl killed!"

How do you see Cyrus spending his summer?

Being warned by anyone who even slightly cares about him not to have another heart attack. Jeff, though, is going fishing, metaphorically at least. I'm taking some kind of vacation.

Will you bring your Twitter account?

Maybe just a little.

"We tease each other: 'I'm Instagramming this!' 'Do I have your permission to tweet this picture of you with your pants around your ankles because they're ripped and being tailored for the next shot?' " Perry

Power play

Do you really think Cyrus is devoted to government? Or is that a lie his id tells his superego, so he can seek power?

I wouldn't rule out your supposition. But I'm going to hold dear to the belief that there is idealism in the fundamental fabric of the guy. It's only one piece of the puzzle, but I think it is intact. And as long as I'm playing him, it will be, because I don't understand the guy if that isn't somewhere in there.

7 'The Raid 2'
There's technically no raid in this sequel to the Indonesian super-martial arts picture "The Raid: Redemption." But there are countless epic beatdowns — plus, unfortunately, a story this time, which might not have been a step up from the first.

8 'Watermark'

An introduction to spark a relationship

Recommended.

Jess and Ken Deckinger, now married and parents to three daughters, created the site to help people meet the same way they did. / PROVIDED

Jess, Meet Ken is a website that represents both a love story and a business idea. "It really is how we met and how we fell in love," says Jessica Deckinger of JessMeetKen.com, the dating site she recently launched with her husband — you guessed it — Ken.

Here's how it works: Women recommend single men in their life to other single women online. Jess and Ken met on a now-defunct website similar to the one the couple now runs with their business partner, Adele Tongish.

The dating world is nothing new for her and Ken; they co-founded HurryDate, which organizes speed-dating events, in 2001 and sold the company several years later.

"This cuts through the noise of online dating and provides you with a true and honest way to meet people in their most genuine form," Ken says of the Boston-based company.

Rather than dealing with the "dating fatigue" that comes from sorting through an overflowing inbox of emails from potential suitors, women can cut through the chaff by connecting with another woman who cares about the guy she posted.

Quoted

"[Guys don't] know how to present [their] redeeming qualities as well as a woman can present them to other women." Ken Deckinger

And that's the key. "Every woman wants to get to the core of who that guy is from someone who knows him very well," he says.

Plus, there's an extra connection when a woman can relate to the woman who's vouching for the guy she's posting about. "I didn't know Adele, but she looked like someone I would be friends with," says Jess, who felt she could relate to Tongish because of the funny profile she created for Ken. In turn, she could relate to Ken, too.

In fact, Ken says a woman can sell a guy better than he can sell himself. A guy doesn't always post what a woman wants to see. "He doesn't know how to present his redeeming qualities as well as a woman can present them to other women," he confesses.

Guys often post photos with their car, their buddies or, worst case scenario, their ex-girlfriends. He reveals, "Women put a guy's photo up that portrays his true and accurate personality."

Then, Tongish wrote about his flaws, capturing his future wife's heart by saying he's not perfect. "She was OK with revealing his flaws to make him endearing to me." Jess mentions he appeared "funny, goofy and confident, but not arrogant."

Ken underscores the importance of highlighting flaws because they make people endearing and illustrate someone's true character. "Everyone has flaws," he says. "And they are typically what make people beautiful."

Deckinger's tips for speed dating

1 Dress to impress. You should be well-dressed but wear clothing that makes you comfortable.

2 Listen. Remember, it's not an interview and you're not on stage. Put your "listening ears" on.

3 Be cordial. At the end of the minidate, say "thank you" and express interest if you'd like to connect later.

PLUS

Click bait

The scoop for online success

1 Be genuine. Photos should be true to who you are.

2 Be open-minded. "Jess had dated guys who were cut from the same mold, and I was very different from that," Ken says.

3 Engage in the process. Be proactive about reaching out to people who you find interesting to learn more about them.

Rock. Frontman Craig Finn talks about the rock 'n' roll party train and how we all have to get off sometime.

A DIFFERENT VIEW OF THE HOLD STEADY

Craig Finn, far left (in both pictures) says he's OK with a more mature Hold Steady. / DANNY CLINCH

Over their 10-year career, the Hold Steady have strategically amassed a catalogue of songs often centered on a recurring group of characters. Craig Finn introduced listeners to tragic heroes and fallen friends caught up in the partying lifestyle, formed from the amalgamation of acquaintances and fictional figures. His spoken delivery embraced witty double entendres, juxtaposing modern jargon with scholarly diction as he portrayed the ups and downs of the down-and-outs. And somehow, he always seemed to stay positive.

With their recent release, "Teeth Dreams," the band's sixth studio album and the first on their own Washington Square label, Finn's songs seem to have naturally evolved from the post-adolescent party to the inevitable adult hangover. These are cautionary tales and proof that yesterday's kicks become tomorrow's bruises.

"It's definitely the darkest Hold Steady record," says Finn. "While the others had been especially hopeful and maybe positive and optimistic, this one may hold back on that optimism a bit. Writing this record, I wasn't in a particularly bad place or anything, I was just fascinated with anxiety and the idea of mental health and the way we treat it nowadays and the way we deal with our neuroses."

With such a repertoire of decadent characters, Finn says that his narrative had to change and that those wandering from the straight-and-narrow will inevitably fall.

"We started the band 10 years ago, and for the past 10 years I've known a lot of people close to me that have struggled with substance abuse and mental health issues," he says. "I'm 42. When you're 32 you might still be going along and having a good time, but at some point it starts to drag you down. ... [Now] I'm trying to write characters that are a little older. I think that's a challenge, and it always has been. Rock 'n' roll is often about a teenager and a convertible. ... It's 50 and 60 years old now, so it doesn't have to be. Great artists like Bruce Springsteen and Neil Young have written great songs about adults."

If their message seems heavy, their instrumentation is even heavier — any somber sentiment quickly finds solace by leaning against the towering guitar solos that were hinted at before, but are now realized in skyscraping realities. The guitars have finally soared to reach Thin Lizzy heights, while Finn's lyrics are still born to run.

'A no-brainer' bill

"I'm surprised it hasn't happened before," says Deer Tick singer John McCauley, calling the pairing a "no-brainer."

The two bands have so much in common that they collaborated for a split 7-inch single that will be on sale at the show. And not unlike the Hold Steady, Deer Tick have matured with their latest album, "Negativity." McCauley says he's OK with that, because one mature album can't dispel a lifetime of rock 'n' roll. "In one way it's kind of mature, but that doesn't mean that everything we do from now on is going to sound grown up or whatever."

A BAR THAT ALMOST DOESN'T SOUND LEGAL

While you won't find me celebrating the opening of many chain restaurants in this space, in the case of Legal Seafood's new Legal Crossing, or LX for short, (which is how you know it's cool), I'll make an exception. That's mostly because the company has done a good job of introducing populist demographics to progressive drinking concepts over the years. Much of that credit goes to longtime Boston bar staple Patrick Sullivan, the company's executive director of bar operations.

The new spot "looks a little different, feels different, and acts a little different than a Legal Sea Foods, for sure," Sullivan says of the bar, open until 2 a.m., seven nights a week. In fact, you might not know you'd wandered into a Legals if you weren't paying attention. Set directly across from the Paramount Theater, which casts twinkling lights in the reflection of the gleaming surface inside, it has the vaguely sophisticated feel of an upscale Downtown Crossing-style bar; it feels like drinking inside an oversized humidor.

Better still for my purposes, the bartenders seem exceptionally enthusiastic about the cocktail menu, always a good sign. Too many bars with money get someone to write up a list then abandon it to undertrained staff. Here they're singing the praises of their tiki-themed, down and stirred and cheeky neighborhood-inspired cocktails.

If you go

Legal Crossing

With many of the drinks you'll have to ask about the specific ingredients before ordering. "Cold tea late night tradition. watch your wallet. delicious & fun beer cooler" reads one that's a nod to the old Chinatown tradition. It's made with Allagash White, Deep Eddy sweet tea, Meletti amaro, Pierre Ferrand Dry Curacao, lemon and sugar and is served in a stainless steel tea pot. That drink, like many of the others, wink at the old Combat Zone era and some of its historic tiki bars, like the Bob Lee's Islander (made with Plantation Original Dark Rum, Plantation 3 Star Rum, demerara syrup, lime, grapefruit and Allspice Dram.)

"It's more like a drinking bar menu than a restaurant bar menu," Sullivan says of a list that incorporates a Chartreuse Swizzle and a crushed ice mezcal cocktail. "It's funny; one of the first weekends our top-selling drink in this restaurant was a stirred down rye and amaro cocktail." That would be the Blackball, made with Templeton rye, Averna and orange bitters. "That is very strange."

There's no secret to the way he writes menus, Sullivan says. It's about trying to engender a fun interaction for the guests. "Drinking is supposed to be fun, sometimes it can get a little too serious for my liking, so I've purposefully built things into the menu that are tongue-in-cheek to get the guests to react in some way, ask a question, make a joke. Once the guests start doing that, the door opens for hospitality."

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Gather together with friends who share your passion and vision. You can mix business and pleasure while collaborating on a new venture.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Take a backseat and relax for a change. Let others make decisions. Pick your battles and don't let a difference of opinion turn into a major problem.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Your home and work environment will be filled with tension if you gossip or get involved in other people's business. Stick to your chores and stay out of trouble.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. If you have ideas for improvement at your workplace, speak up. Even if your suggestions are not acted upon, you will gain respect and credit for making the offer.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Your emotions are on a roller-coaster ride, with you tearful one moment and cheerful the next. Don't let this instability lead to an impulsive decision that can influence a promise.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't reveal too many details. A colleague may be trying to get ahead at your expense. Someone who seems overly enthusiastic could have an ulterior motive.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Keep an open mind today. A casual remark from an old friend will give new spark to your creativity. A trip to an unfamiliar location will result in a rewarding partnership.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. You don't appreciate being scrutinized, so don't question what others are up to. Be trusting. Your relationships will suffer if you display jealousy.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. An elderly relative may be a burden. Look over your budget and see where you can make beneficial adjustments. Contracts or legal matters should be dealt with now.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. The time is right for love. Take things slow and easy. You may be feeling romantic, but don't come on too strong, or your special someone may take off in the other direction.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Don't waste time gossiping or sharing personal stories when you should be working. You'll be criticized if you don't finish what you start with efficiency and dispatch. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Even safety does not justify torture

Re: 'Torture in the name of US freedom' (Metro, April 8) I am appalled and saddened by the opinions of letter writer Mary Ruggiero. She claims that by standing against torture, Rep. Pelosi and Sen. Feinstein "do not love this country." I love this country; in fact I joined the Army and went to Kosovo and Iraq in support of it. Yet I will never condone the torture of human beings, whether they are terrorists or anyone else. I understand the desire to be safe, but we do not achieve that through torture. We lose our soul as a country — not to mention the souls of those compelled to conduct those interrogation techniques.
ANNIE FERRIS, VIA EMAIL

To letter writer Mary Ruggiero: Gov. Bobby Jindal correctly names your kind the Stupid Party, because you can't understand even this simple seven-word sentence: "The ends do not justify the means." Only hypocrites enforce laws by breaking them — for example, by spying on those who might spy on us, or murdering murderers via the death penalty. To reduce crime, why not have a 10 p.m. curfew, during which any unauthorized person is shot on sight?
J. ANDREW SMITH, VIA EMAIL

Inquiring minds want 'Iron Chef' previews

I'm just curious — I've been reading Metro for years, but I've never seen any shows that I watch on the "TV watch list." How come you never report on the "NCIS" shows or "Criminal Minds" or "Law & Order: SVU" or "Kitchen Nightmares" or "Chopped" or "Iron Chef?" That's just a portion of what I watch, but I've never seen any shows that I actually watch in your paper.

Masters betting guide

Who are the favorites, underdogs and best options to make some dough at this weekend's big event?

MARK OSBORNE
mark.osborne@metro.us

The biggest event in golf, the Masters at Augusta National, gets underway Thursday, April 10. And if you're anything like us, the tournament signals the unofficial start of a golf season which actually began a couple months ago.

So if you are looking to lay down a few shekels on the premier event in golf — recreational only, of course — you probably could use a bit of help. We try to give you a guide here.

First tip: Don't bet on Tiger Woods. (He's not playing after undergoing back surgery.)

Beyond that, we break down some favorites, money makers and dark horses who have a chance to wear the green jacket on Sunday.

PHIL MICKELSON: 12/1 MICKELSON IS THIRD ON THIS LIST FOR ONLY ONE REASON: HIS POPULARITY. HE'S HAD A DREADFUL SEASON.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

The favorites ...

Adam Scott: 10/1
The defending champion is the co-favorite to take the tournament in 2014, as well. The Aussie has played decently on the PGA Tour this year (five tournaments, four Top-12 finishes), but he has yet to win.

Rory McIlroy: 10/1
The 24-year-old from Northern Ireland is the other co-favorite atop the odds. He has had a similar season to Scott — good but no wins yet. He has three Top-10 finishes, including last week at the Houston Open. McIlroy had a disappointing 2013 after winning four tournaments in 2012.

Money makers ...

Jordan Spieth: 33/1
The 20-year-old rising star is one of the top underdogs to win the tournament. In fact, he's gotten so much attention recently, his odds have risen all the way to 33/1. He's playing well — currently 13th in the World Golf rankings.

Luke Donald: 50/1
The Englishman has a game well-suited to Augusta. He has three Top-10 finishes in the last nine years and Top 10s at each of the majors in his career. He's just waiting to break through. Donald has a couple Top-10 finishes this season as well, including a fourth-place finish.

SAY HELLO TO THE FUTURE STUD OF THE PGA TOUR: JORDAN SPIETH. GET YOUR BETS IN BEFORE HE BLOWS UP.

Dark horses ...

Steve Stricker: 80/1
Stricker is about as boring a pick as they come. Sorry, Steve. But if you're looking for a conservative choice to win the Masters, he's a good option. He has 16 career PGA Tour wins and finished in the Top 20 in all three majors he competed in last year. If you're doing a multi-pick office pool, you'll probably be the only one to select him. (That's a good thing.)

Matt Every: 150/1
You probably don't know the name (we don't blame you), but he might be the best dark horse option in the tournament. He's getting very poor odds for a player who won at the star-studded Arnold Palmer Invitational a few weeks ago. In fact, he outdueled Scott to get the win in the event. The Arnold Palmer was his first tour win and he has very little history in majors. His win on March 23 earned him his first invite to the Masters. It's unlikely he'll win, but he'll be fun to root for regardless.

STEVE STRICKER MIGHT NOT BE THE MOST EXCITING PICK TO WIN THE MASTERS, BUT HE HAS THE RIGHT STUFF.

Masters pairings

- Group 1: Stewart Cink, Tim Clark — 7:45 a.m.
- Group 7: Tom Watson, Billy Horschel, Brendon de Jonge — 8:51 a.m.
- Group 9: Angel Cabrera, Gary Woodland, Ian Poulter — 9:13 a.m.
- Group 11: Graeme McDowell, Rickie Fowler, Jimmy Walker — 9:35 a.m.
- Group 12: Zach Johnson, K.J. Choi, Steve Stricker — 9:57 a.m.
- Group 16: Adam Scott, Jason Dufner, Matthew Fitzpatrick — 10:41 a.m.
- Group 17: Jordan Spieth, Patrick Reed, Rory McIlroy — 10:52 a.m.
- Group 29: Bubba Watson, Luke Donald, Sergio Garcia — 1:15 p.m.
- Group 32: Phil Mickelson, Ernie Els, Justin Rose — 1:48 p.m.

Sox set for Yankees

The first installment of Red Sox-Yankees for the 2014 season begins Thursday in New York (7 p.m., NESN). Clay Buchholz (0-0, 12.46 ERA) will square off against Michael Pineda (0-1, 1.50 ERA). The Sox beat the Rangers, 4-2, Wednesday at Fenway.

No. 1

Bruins (53-18-8)

With a win on Thursday in Winnipeg, coupled with a loss by St. Louis at Minnesota, the Bruins can capture their second ever Presidents' Trophy. By going 6-1-3 in its last 10 games, Boston has created some separation between itself and St. Louis. For the B's, it's all about getting rest for their key players before the postseason begins next week.

No. 2

Ducks (51-20-8)

The race for the top seed in the Western Conference has unexpectedly become interesting with St. Louis' swoon.

No. 3

Blues (52-20-7)

St. Louis has lost its last three games and has scored two or less goals in nine of their last 11.

No. 4

Avalanche (51-21-7)

Colorado is hot, having gone 7-1-2 in its last 10 games. Their final three regular season games are on the road.

No. 5

Sharks (49-21-9)

No. 6

Blackhawks (45-19-15)

Chicago has won its last three games and the better news is that Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews are close to returning.

No. 7

Penguins (50-24-5)

A B's-Pens East final is a foregone conclusion for most, but don't be surprised if the slumping Pens get bounced early.

No. 8

Canadiens (45-27-7)

Fun fact: The Canadiens will be the only Canadian team in the 2014 Stanley Cup playoffs. No pressure, guys!

No. 9

Kings (45-28-6)

The Kings have dropped their last two games, but are still 7-3-0 in their past 10. They are locked into the No. 6 or 7 seed.
